

DEATH OF BABY EXPLAINED AS DUE TO IODINE BURNS

Medical Examiner of Queens
Investigates Treatment Given
Son of Banker.

The death of seventeen-month-old Winston Lanier Washington Jr., son of the clubman and banker, in a nursery run by Mrs. Amelia Cohen at No. 625 117th Street, Richmond Hill, was caused by shock from iodine burns, according to Dr. William H. Nammack, Medical Examiner of Queens, who said the child developed a rash and Mrs. Cohen was ordered by physicians to "touch" the spots with iodine. Following the death of the baby, Dr. Nammack says he found that the baby's entire body had been painted.

Mrs. Cohen says that she followed the instructions of Drs. E. J. Cronin and Russell J. McGraw and applied an iodine salve. Mr. and Mrs. Washington said the child had been placed in the care of Mrs. Cohen because Mrs. Washington was not well enough to care for her baby.

The baby died in convulsions and Dr. McGraw reported the death to the Medical Examiner who immediately made an investigation. Dr. Nammack said today: "I have reported the case to the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children for action." Newspaper files show that Mrs. Washington moved from her husband's apartment at No. 19 West 34th Street, early last year and later filed divorce papers. She charged that her husband and a woman visited several times together and stated that she had not lived with her husband since January. Testimony was given before Hugo Hirsch, of Brooklyn, as referee, who recommended that Mrs. Washington was entitled to an absolute divorce. Mr. Washington's first wife was Miss May Bruce Brennan of Louisville, Ky., by whom he was divorced.

Why It Costs So Much To Mine Anthracite

WHAT natural resource so essential to public welfare and health demands such expense and effort to reclaim as anthracite coal? Obstacles must be overcome at every step of its progress from rock-ribbed fastnesses underground to our homes and factories. The miner's pick—the waiting railroad car—your local dealer's delivery cart—these are only a few of the links in the anthracite chain. Through-out its length, outlays of money and labor are required.

Explosives, air for ventilation, and timber in vast quantities are called for every day in the operation of an anthracite mine.

Fully as important as the unceasing use of these materials is the removal from the mine of tons of rock. Also thousands of gallons of water are pumped daily.

Mines use 50,000,000 pounds of explosives to blast out the 195 miles of tunnels and gang ways driven annually.

This tunneling, equal to the building of a double-track subway between New York and Philadelphia, is necessary in order to get at new supplies of coal.

For every ton of coal mined, 6,700 cubic feet of air must be forced into the workings by elaborate fan and blower systems.

Supporting props must be changed constantly. More than 800 feet of lumber is used for every carload of coal.

Water which gathers constantly in the mines must be kept down. This means costly pumping every hour in the 24.

On the average 18 tons of water are raised to the surface for each ton of coal produced—1,620,000,000 tons of water annually.

Even the ton of material coming up in the mine car often contains 33 per cent of slate and other refuse.

Of the remainder one-third of the coal is too small to use in homes, and is always sold at a loss.

As a result there is often less than ½ ton of coal-bin anthracite out of each ton of material mined and handled.

The cost of supplies and of the waste removed is additional to the cost of labor and the expense of converting in the breakers the coal into domestic anthracite.
